BUILDERADIUS, INC. AND MANATRON, INC. ANNOUNCE NEW PARTNERSHIP

ASHEVILLE, NC - August 6, 2007 – BUILDERadius, Inc., a leading provider of community development software, and Manatron, Inc., an industry leader in local and state government tax and appraisal software, today announced a new partnership to offer ground-breaking integration solutions for building department and tax assessment software.

Recognizing that city and county governments are funded largely by local property taxes, BUILDERadius and Manatron have created two innovative solutions that allow the tax assessor to have the most up-to-date building permit information possible. Both integrations seamlessly link the building department and the tax assessor's office, creating more accurate property tax rolls and increasing tax revenues.

For jurisdictions searching for new building department software, the partnership offers BluePrince®, BUILDERadius' community development software, integrated with Manatron's CAMA and Tax software. This solution offers building departments BluePrince's award-winning client / server based community development software with built-in tax assessor integration. For jurisdictions satisfied with their building department software, the partnership's Data Integration Service integrates any building department software with Manatron's tax assessment software. This allows building departments to keep their existing software and allows two previously separate software packages to share information and data automatically.

These flexible solutions provide a robust, cross-departmental approach to all facets of local property development. With a seamless flow of information, the tax assessor's office has the most up-to-date information possible, creating more complete property tax rolls. BUILDERadius and Manatron's integration solutions facilitate communication among departments, increasing property tax revenue and allowing jurisdictions to function more efficiently.
